DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. Claims 1-5, 7-16, 18-27, and 29-34 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Fritsch (U.S. Pat. App. Pub. 2002/0124258).
2. Regarding claims 1, Fritsch disclosed a method and system comprising automatically transferring one or more of media, data and/or service to a view of one or both of a first media processing system and/or a first personal computer within the distributed media network, wherein said automatic transfer is controlled by utilizing at least a first rule ("media delivery center receives media-rich broadcasts", see paragraph [0028], [0031], [0033]); and automatically routing said automatically transferred one or more of media, data and/or service from said view of said one or both of said first media processing system and/or said first personal computer to a view of one or both of a second media processing system and/or a second personal computer ("media programs are delivered to output devices by a media delivery system", see paragraph [0028], [0031], [0033]), wherein said first and second views comprise one or more of: a device view, a media view, and a channel view ("a particular channel", see paragraph [0033]).
3. Regarding claims 2, Fritsch disclosed the method and system comprising consuming said routed one or more of said media, data and/or service by said one or both of said second media processing system and/or said second personal computer (see paragraph [0039]).

4. Regarding claims 3, Fritsch disclosed the method and system comprising controlling said consumption by said one or both of said second media processing system and/or said second personal computer by utilizing at least a second rule (see paragraph [0046]).
5. Regarding claims 4, Fritsch disclosed the method and system comprising scheduling said consumption of said one or more of said media, data and/or service by said one or both of said second media processing system and/or said second personal computer utilizing said at least a second rule (see paragraph [0046]).
6. Regarding claims 5, Fritsch disclosed the method and system wherein said at least a second rule is a consumption rule (see paragraph [0046]).
7. Regarding claims 7, Fritsch disclosed the method and system comprising pre-defining said at least a first rule (see paragraph [0033], [0037]).
8. Regarding claims 8, Fritsch disclosed the method and system wherein said at least a first rule is a transfer rule (see paragraph [0033], [0037]).
9. Regarding claims 9, Fritsch disclosed the method and system comprising controlling said automatic routing utilizing at least a third rule (see paragraph [0033], [0037]).
10. Regarding claims 10, Fritsch disclosed the method and system comprising predefining said at least a third rule (see paragraph [0033], [0037]).
11. Regarding claims 11, Fritsch disclosed the method and system wherein said at least a third rule is a routing rule (see paragraph [0033], [0037]).

12. Claims 12-16, 18-27, and 29-34 substantially claim the same invention as claims 1-5 and 7-11. Accordingly, these claims are rejected under the same rationale detailed above.

Response to Arguments

13. Applicant's arguments filed 01/15/08 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

14. Regarding claim 1 rejected under 35 U.S.C. as being anticipated by Fritsch, Applicant asserts that Fritsch does not disclose "wherein said automatic transfer is controlled by utilizing at least a first rule" as claimed. Applicant argues that "Fritsch does not describe how media content is transferred to the media center 300 and how the transfer is controlled" or "that the transfer of the content 302 is controlled in any way by a rule". Examiner notes that the claimed "first rule" is broadly recited, and is not limited by the claim language regarding any specific mechanics. At best, the claimed "first rule" as recited in claim 1 has the functionality of "controlling" the transfer of data to the first media processing system/computer. As acknowledged by Applicant, the media delivery center of Fritsch receives data (i.e., "transferring...media...to...a first media processing system", claim 1). Examiner submits that any number of provisions associated with the transfer of data between the media deliver center and content source of Fritsch reads on the broad concept of controlling such transfer using a "first rule". For example, the protocol used to transfer data ("media delivery center 202 can receive local TV broadcasts 204 and satellite broadcasts", paragraph [0031]), the format of the data ("video, audio or graphic forms", paragraph [0031]), subscription rules ("end users subscribe to the media delivery system for various programs", paragraph [0031]), or security rules ("media program content 302 is encrypted", paragraph [0033]) can all be considered "rules" as they are clearly aspects that control the transfer of media content to the media delivery center. The breadth of the claim language allows for such a reasonable interpretation. While it may be argued that the reference does not specifically refer to such considerations as "rules", to consider the provisions governing data transfer noted above as rules would have been reasonably drawn from the disclosure of Fritsch. "[I]n considering the disclosure of a reference, it is proper to take into account not only specific teachings of the reference but also the inferences which one skilled in the art would reasonably be expected to draw therefrom." In re Preda, 401 F.2d 825, 826, 159 USPQ 342, 344 (CCPA 1968). See MPEP 2144.01. Accordingly, Examiner submits that Fritsch reads on the claim limitation argued.
